www.polymorphin.com

Lauren Dimaya is a tiny, queer Filipino-American illustrator with a big heart for magical stories. She has drawn for Studio Drydock's Wylde Flowers, produced an online course on visual storytelling, and is currently illustrating Remy Lai's YA graphic novel, The Demon's Prince. Inspired by her heritage and its mythology, Lauren's dream is to bring relatable queer Filipino narratives into the graphic novel world. Outside of drawing, she can be found in NYC museum-hopping or nervously roller skating.
